Eye Diagnosis in Chinese Medicine: A Comprehensive TCM Guide for the Discerning Practitioner By Deliang Zheng (Sun Yat-sen University) May 2014

Eye Diagnosis, It is a simple method of examination and diagnosis based on the interconnected nature of the human body. By assuming that the eye is a microcosm of the activity of the body, certain patterns can be isolated and analyzed. These indicators have been found to correlate with different diseases and malaises of the body, being able to find the source of chronic problems before clinical presentation is evident. With a diagnosis derived from a cost-effective non-invasive exam of the eye, a corresponding treatment can be delivered precisely and early in the progression of an illness. The book my father wrote, Eye Diagnosis in a Nutshell, is an in-depth outline of the technique and its application. The compendium is a combination of theoretical and practical teaching that informs the reader on the various eye indicators, their corresponding disorders, and the necessary treatment. The book contains hundreds of studies and Chinese medical herbal tea formulas.
