Moving Mumbai: Seriously Short Stories By Aditi Kelkar

Moving Mumbai is a collection of Seriously Short Stories on Mumbai. Through her minute observations of everyday, ordinary lives, the author draws extraordinary and beautiful perceptions of the people of Mumbai

It's fascinating the way she takes the regular and the mundane and, by adding nothing more than beautiful words and perceptive observations, makes it magical. Just goes to show what I always believe – we all have the same eyes, but we rarely see the same things.

- Siddhant Lahiri, Strategic Planner, employed with one of India's leading Advertising agencies.

"Articulate. Intimate. Perfect yet quirky, she touches the heart. Aditi completely captures the spirit of the city within the lines of verse and her words."

- Arnob Mukherji, Media planning trainer and Media sales professional, employed with one of India's largest Media houses.

Editorial Review

About the Author

Aditi Kelkar is a poetess, a writer, a singer, a yoga and fitness enthusiast, foodie, amateur chef and a Computer Engineer too.

Having done a stint as a Software Engineer, she went on to pursue a career in Advertising, and currently works as a Copywriter in the city of Mumbai. She records her everyday experiences in the city, encapsulated into short stories, which more than often lead to great friendships and relationships. A keen observer of people around her, she also enjoys capturing them through the lens of her DSLR.

Living in the city, and leading an independent life with a brand new career, she explored the many facets of her being and fell in love with Mumbai. Every day, the city fascinated her with the colors in the chaos, the robustness in the routine and the acceptance in the accommodation.

She lives a life that boasts of rich experiences, full-bodied conversations and vibrant encounters, which find expression in her writings.

Moving Mumbai is the first collection of her stories and poems to be published.
