Editorial Review

Review

"I bought the other 4 in the series. I guess that says something about whether I liked it or not." - Roberta Guidry, Amazon reviewer"

From the Author

Q - When is the last book expected out?

A - I'm currently working on the sixth and final book in this series. I'm doing my absolute best on the last one because I want it to live up to reader's expectations.

Q - Why do all the books end in a cliff-hanger?

A - I wrote the story as a serial where the story continues from episode to episode, like long ago in radio, TV and film. The only book that will not end in a cliff-hanger is the last book, number six. Everything will wrap up nice and tidy in book six. I will do other stories in this universe, but this series will have a firm conclusion in book six.

Q - What's the deal with garden gnomes?

A - Well, purely from an ecological perspective, they're an invasive alien species. In some parts of the state of Florida, garden gnomes have almost completely displaced the native population of plastic pink flamingos. I've personally seen the destruction a gang of well-armed gnomes can do to a flock of defenseless plastic flamingos. It's an image that you can't un-see. People have the mistaken impression gnomes are nice, I mean nice. But the truth is... they are a scourge that must be eradicated. That is my mission.

About the Author

Lucian lives in Florida with his wife and two sons. He also lives with a pack of eight (yes eight) miniature dachshunds that he uses to hunt Garden Gnomes. An avid Gnome hunter since his days with the Fifth Special Gnome Expeditionary Forces based out of Fort Bragg, he has personally been responsible for the reduction in the Florida pest population of the common Garden Gnome, Gnomiansis Gardenii.

Unfortunately, since he uses mini dachshunds to hunt them, he only has a few intact heads in his trophy room.

But if you're in Florida and run into him, he might show them to you.
